Monthly Comment

Markets rose in April; macro disappointments were more than compensated by solid underlying results whilst the strength of the dollar was also a relief. ELEV A Absolute Return Europe was up 0.64% over the month.

The long book had a positive impact on performance with strong contributors in IT, Healthcare and Energy, whilst Consumer Staples were a drag. Companies with Russian exposure (Raiffeisen, Coca-Cola HBC) were under pressure with US sanctions having a significant impact on the Ruble. Telenet was also under pressure with a poorly received set of numbers. Conversely, Aker BP and Royal Dutch Shell performed well, supported by the oil price movements in the month whilst Kering and Koninklijke Philips had better than expected results. On the contrary, the short book had a negative impact on performance. Short covering in Consumer Discretionary affected performance, although Technology shorts had a positive impact facilitated by our negative view on semiconductors.

On the long book, we initiated a position in Danish wind farm operator Orsted. The groups' expertise in offshore wind farms can act as a competitive advantage in a market which is likely to grow substantially on a global basis in the next few years. In our view, this is a clear differentiated business model in the utility space. Glencore was sold with limited commodity upside and on concerns of their exposure to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. We have also initiated a number of new Financials, Technology and Industrial shorts.

As of 30th April 2018, gross exposure has increased to 113%, while net exposure is at 22.8%. Since inception, ELEV A Absolute Return Europe is down 0.17%.
